BIOGRAPHY

Daniel Shea is a senior policy specialist at NCSL. As part of NCSL's Energy Program, he tracks and analyzes state policy and legislative trends, keeping an eye out for new developments and their implications on the energy sector. His work has focused on energy security and grid resiliency, critical infrastructure and cybersecurity, in addition to issues related to energy markets, state regulation, nuclear, fossil fuels and energy storage. Prior to joining NCSL, he worked as a journalist for a variety of news organizations across the United States, Central America and the Caribbean. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Miami University in Ohio.
